Red Alert

My mother surely knew the world lurked along that path. She had to know the world’s filled with wolves, that their special habitat is a forest where little girls walk alone. She dressed me in the color of raw meat, she filled my basket with warm-scented goodies and sent me specifically into the woods. A long way into the woods. For years I believed it was wolves that I had to beware.

Published in Keeping Still, 2005
* Casting Two Shadows, 2010