Use the directory at www.publiclibraries.com to find your public library's web site and links to its online resources. If your library is not listed, call (1-800-388-2366 x 4031) or email (library@regis.edu) the Reference Desk for help finding your local library, its web site, and

What you see on the Alumni LibGuide may be slightly different from what you will view in this tutorial since the library guide is not static but is a work in progress that will be periodically revised and updated.

First, choose your field of interest. Would you like to find articles or information in the field of business, health care, humanities, information technology, science, or social science?

Let's take a look at some business resources. Click the "Business" tab.

If you hold the cursor of your mouse over the "Business" tab, a pull-down menu provides you with choices: Articles, Data & Statistics, Government Resources, and Web Sites.

If we click "Articles", we are presented with links to a number of quality databases that contain some full-text, scholarly articles. The Directory of Open Access Journals (DOAJ) contains a collection of free, full-text scholarly journal articles from a variety of fields including business. Google Scholar is another excellent resource that contains many scholarly, full-text journal articles in a number of different subject areas.

	Welcome to the Alumni Resources Guide. Alumni are welcome to visit the Dayton Memorial Library in person and to use the print and online resources that are available in the library. Although Alumni do not have remote access to the Regis subscription databases once they graduate, there are ways to find other free scholarly online resources. The tabs on this guide will connect you to free databases, online journals, government websites, and statistics websites in specific subject areas including Business, Health Care, Humanities, Information Technology & Science, and Social Sciences. 	Your local public library may have these and more. If you visit your public library and obtain a card, you will probably gain remote online access to their online databases and journals. Many public libraries allow you to use your public library card number to login to the databases and online journals on their website from home (or off-site).	Links: Website / Blog Profile & Guides
	Use the directory at www.publiclibraries.com to find your public library's web site and links to its online resources. If your library is not listed, call (1-800-328-2366 x 4031) or email (library@regis.edu) the Reference Desk for help finding your local library, its web site, and databases.
